HUDSON WINS HEAT AFTER HEAVY FALL

John S. McNuity's Mare Turns Somersault at Driving Matinee, but Scores Victory in Third stand. Heat by Wide Margin.

After turning a complete comersault while going at full speed in the first heat of the 2:29 pure at Waterworks Park yesterday, Tolla Hadson, driven by T. H. Quinn, competed in the succeeding two heats, winning the third heat by nearly 100 wards.

The event was the feature of the Gentlemen's Driving Club card and was competed in heats alternated with those of the other races. On account of the length of the programme it was dark before the deciding heat could be pared, and it will be run off next Senday. Four candidates lined up for the fenture rate and got away to a good start. Just as they were fairly in their stride didna. the friends of Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan and, probably, by Jack McClelland of Pittsburg.

In all the announcements of the battle between Nelson and Attell at Philadelphia, references are made to the fact that Attell claims that he is the "legitimate" feather-weight champion. As the Constitution of the United States allows the right to free speech, he can claim this as much as he pleases. But where the basis for his claim comes in is more than Brooklyn Tommy Pullivan can under-

In as fair and square a battle as eve

In as fair and square a battle as ever was fought, held in this city and presided over by Harry Sharpe, the best known local referee, Attell went down in a clean knock-out before the Brooklyn fighter. This bout, with Abe's consent, was advertised as being for the legitimate feather-weight champloushby.

Although the weight agreed upon was led pounds. Sullivan weighed but 122 pounds when he stepped on the scales. Attell weighed the same, apparently, as the beam wavered but a trifle when he stepped on the scales. Attell weighed the same mark.

In the fifth round a smashing left-hand upper-cut landed on Abe's stomach and fairly lifted him off his feet. He rollied to the faor, unable to get up, and Sullivan was proclaimed the winner.

To prevent the chance of any misunder-standing, Referre Sharpe coiled for an examination by Doctors Marks and Parrish, both stated that they could find no mark of any foul on Attell and this verdict corroborated the judgment of the referee.

A short time before Abe Attell and Jack McChelland fought here. McChelland landed a savage upper-cut to the stomach, realizing that it was Attell's weak point, and Attell again went down for the count. This fight was also advertised in the focal papers as being for the "legitimate" feather-weight championship, McClelland won, his victory being credited to a kneekeast.

Were it not for the fact that Tommy Sallivan is teel up with his engagements at the Missouri Athletic Cub, it is likely that another match between the men would be the point for which verious athistic chibs would strive. That Sallivan is that another match between the men would be the point for which various ath-hele clubs would girlye. That Sallivan is Attell's superior at all points of the game. Attell's superior at all points of the game, save running away is conceded by those who witnessed their meeting here.

Attell can run away from any opponent faster than any man in the ring. This much is conceded. But if boxing championships are to be handed down on account of sprinting ability, it seems that the witness of the Olympic championships of last summer should receive the paim and not Abe Attell

Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan has the fol owing to say about the match: When I fought Abe Attell I understood that the match was to be for the so-called 'egitimate' feather-weight title. Inasmuch as McGovern had agreed to fight for the title at 127 pounds, I couldn't quite see where another title in the same class came in, but I was willing to take a chance at it.

"I knew I could best Abe, and I kneeked him cold. The blow wasn't low. It isnded fairly in the pit of his stomach. According to that, I'm the champion at the III-point figure. Jack McClelland kneeked him ent at 124 bounds. Where Abe cats it with a claim is more than I can see. I knew I can beat him any time.

"Every sporting editor in the city knows that I was willing to fight him ligain, but that I was willing to fight him ligain, but that he wanted to cut the weekent down. that I was willing to fight him again, but that he wanted to cut the weight down right awar. He wouldn't fight under the same conditions. I can lick Attell any of the week. So can McClelland. Where he has a right to call himself thangion, beats me. He has been put are y two at the weight he claims to be for changion of the wouldn't have a seek with McClelland, Nelsen, myself or Cribett in a twenty-round fight.

AVERT AUTO COLLISION BY TURNING MACHINES AND RUNNING INTO CURBS

Two Children and Mother of Herbert A. Vrooman Are Thrown From Machine, but No One Is Hurt-Escape Is Remarkable.

Mr. Vrooman was going west in his machine on West Pine boulevard, and it was to avoid colliding with another automobile driven by John Allen, residing at the St. George Hotel, and owned by C. E. More of the Buckingham Club, who was rapidly going south on Compton avenue, that the accident occurred.

Mr. Vroomen is now congratulating himself on the miraculous escape of his mother and little children from severe injuries. All three were thrown out on the payement with great force when the machine hit the curb Although Mrs. M. L. Vrooman, his mother, is 65 years old, she escaped with only a slight scrutch on the left forearm. The accident occurred about 5.30 o'clock when Vrosman was returning home from a visit to friends in East St. Louis. He was running at the regulation rate when he reached Compton avenue. Just as he was about to cross the street, he says, Allen's machine appeared on Compton college.

Allen's machine appeared on Compton college.

The damage to Vrooman's machine appeared on Compton college. The little boy and girl, aged 9 and 5, respectively, fell on top of her and were not injured.

Both automobiles struck curbs to avoid a collision.

To try to stop by reversing the lever would have resulted only in being struck by Allen's machine with terrible force. Both Mr. Vrooman and Allen realized the danger in a moment, and without hesitation both turned toward the curb on the south side of Pine street. The former struck on the southeast corner. The stock threw all the occupants out of Vrocuman's automobile except himself, and broke the two front wheels. The bed struck the ground.

Allen steered into the curb on the southwest corner of West Pine Houlevard and Compton avenue and escaped, after breaking one of the front wheels of the automobile he was driving. He was arrested by the police on the charge of reckless driving.

CHASE IN CALVARY CEMETERY.

Frightened Animal Is Stopped at Gate, Against Which It Might Have Dashed-No One Injured.

At the risk of his life Policeman Edward Dwyer of the Mounted District went to the assistance of a coachman whose horse became unmanageable in Calvary Cemetery yesterday afternoon, endangering the lives of Mrs. William H. Corceran of No. 1801 Bacon street, and her three small children. Mrs. Corcoran's husband is court reporter of the Circuit Court. Policeman Dwyer was riding along the main drive about half a mile north of the main entrance to the cemetery, when his attention was attracted to Section 12 by the loud screams of a woman and children. A second later he saw Mrs. Corcoran grasping her 1-year-old baby boy in her arms, while her two small daughters, the oldest of whom is 7 years, were holding to her arms. They were in a surrey driven by a negro.

Dwyer realized that the horse was beyoud the control of the driver and started in pursuit. Digging the spurs into his horse and plying the lash, he was off in an instant. Through the winding driveways of the cemetery he chased the vehicle, which was probably fifty yards in front of him As the surrey entered the main drive

Dwyer spurred his horse on, and reached the bridle when the rumway was within 100 feet of the gate. He gare the animal's head a sudden jerk and brought it to a stop, but not until he had been nearly dragged off his horse.

When the rumaway was stopped Mrs. Corooran, frightened almost to distraction, stepped out and lifted the children to the ground. She was speechless for several seconds, but as soon as her excitement.
